

I'm not robot

Continue

Chunkzz full movie songs

I like movies. I love music. But I especially like it both when I'm moved by them. When they force me to feel something. These are the ones we remember. The ones we hold when we have nothing else. The ones that give us comfort, help us remember and connect us in ways that we might not otherwise describe. We can choose all the latest Disney and Pixar movies to grab with the songs that make charts or just become something so iconic that we love or hate forever. (Think Let it Go from Frozen or Happy from Despicable Me.) However, some of the best songs were either long forgotten or rejected because they didn't sell millions of downloads on iTunes. My playlist is a wide range of songs – I don't stick to a particular genre. I choose what I feel or need at that moment. If I'm getting ready to run, I need something different than when I'm away for an occasional walk in my neighborhood. If I need something to just sing to (not very well, you might add), then who knows what you might find. Being an adult doesn't mean we should lose on G rated movies. More often than not, even animated films reflect real life by portraying struggle, guilt and uncertainty. Often, the characters in these films face decisions that they just want to be able to undo after the result is known, so I often experience. As in life, there are times when we fail miserably and touch the greatness. Maybe that's why I don't miss a new animated film - it just couldn't be a hidden treasure somewhere in the soundtrack that you might fall in love with and need. The songs capture those moments for us and attach a song to it so that we can sing together. These songs are not in a certain order, but life only works that way, sometimes also. Somewhere out there – from American Tail (by Linda Ronstadt and James Ingram) Sometimes our lives take us on travelers who keep us apart from the people we love the most and the best way to get through the days until we see them again is knowing that someone misses you. We also feel the embrace of their love, even if we are separated by miles. This song only comforts me when I feel a little alone and even though our lives are busy and chaotic, I know I'm loved. We can't be everywhere, but our love can. The Trail We Blaze - from The Road to El Dorado (by Elton John) Life is an adventure and this song reminds us to travel on the road less traveled. To search for what is on the other side. Be excited and not be held back by fear. To be life-discoverers. We may not always know what is at the end of the road and can't lead us to lost City of Gold, but that's not what really matters in the end. Being a pioneer means step step from the crowd and chasing a dream only we can see... means to start the conversation... means standing when everyone else is sitting down. Every big change in the world was made possible by someone who wasn't. Was, by compliance and we should follow their example and can cause a bit of scandal ourselves! Here comes the Sun – from The Bee Movie (by Sheryl Crow) This song makes us sing. Fill hearts with happiness and smile. On a cloudy day, we yearn for that great orange glow in the sky and rely on it not only to warm the planet, but gives us hope. Things in life don't always go so we'd love it and the disappointment might be waiting just around the corner, but this song makes me think, hold and stay strong. It reminds us that life is always full of changes. Someone's Waiting for You – from The Rescuers (by Lea Salonga) our travels, our lives and our wanderings, we sometimes find ourselves lost, unable to find our way back home. It's easy to believe that we can be so easily forgotten - but who can say that no matter how long it takes, no matter why you left, that you wouldn't be greeted with open arms and loved even more? Sometimes we feel the need to see what else is out there, and without realizing what we're doing, we're walking away from the one thing we've taken for granted. In our lifetimes, we meet very few people who will do anything and everything to be there for you... never take them for granted. Here I Am – from Spirit, the Stallion of the Cimarron (by Bryan Adams) There is no greater song about being honest with ourselves and what we want than this ballad. In it, I find comfort in knowing that being vulnerable, chasing what seems only out of reach, and knowing who I am is more valuable than anything. We can lose possessions and fall on our faces, but if we don't know who we are or what we believe in, then nothing else matters. If we don't know who we are, what's the point of being alive? This song reminds me to stop hiding behind everything that scares me and to trust the freedom that comes with the truth found in our essence and soul. With life full of chaotic and crowded moments, sometimes the best thing we can do is stop worrying about everything. We exercise a lot of energy and time by taking on scenarios that may never come to be. It doesn't mean the madness is gone, it means we have to get away from it for a while. It's our mini-cow. Our escape. Sure, we know that the real world is still there, but sometimes our philosophy has to be one day at a time and that whatever we don't know now we'll figure out when we need to later. Make it your motto and go through every day. Around Riverbend - from Pocahontas (by Arielle Jacobs) We have this sense of adventure that excites us and even if we don't know what happens next, fear won't keep us from doing what creeps us and what moves us. Staying in the same place is not an option and pushing the envelope is always where our agenda is located. our endless to see what is out there and we can interact with it is how we cheat the staleness of an otherwise boring existence. We're breaking a few rules along way and see things from a different perspective, allowing our minds to grow in ways we might otherwise have missed. go ahead... take a peak. It might be everything you ever wanted. You've Got a Friend in Me - from Toy Story (by Randy Newman) No matter who we are, we all need friends. Not just the kind of friends who show up when they need something or when it's convenient, but those who will do nothing and everything for us. They are dedicated to your friendship and they need you as much as you need them. You may not always see eye to eye and you may say things you might regret later, but when it comes to that, you support each other. Whatever happens. By thick and thin. When all is said and done, a man is no better than the friends he has and the friendship he offers. Why should I worry? – from Oliver & Company (by Billy Joel) No matter where we come from or how much we know, we can't always plan life. We will have to adapt to the ever-changing landscape, the traps and roadblocks that get in our way and improvise when necessary. No one has a life plan and no book will teach us what to expect, but somehow we know that carrying worry and uncertainty is not how living our best life should be. Walking high and confident through life will teach us to be strong and brave when things don't go our way. Even if we don't have every answer to every question, we can still act as we do. You'll be in my heart – from Tarzan (by Phil Collins) Having three sons of mine and sending him off to college last year, this song was one of many that made me happy and sad at the same time. A mother's love never leaves and it is love that cannot be forgotten or lost – no matter how far a child travels. Sometimes our family is not the one we were born in, but the people we connect with and love them without limits. Loved ones never go a day without feeling our love and when the moments you have together are short or never seem to be enough, to tell them that... you're always in my heart, closer than you could ever imagine. Reflection - from Mulan (by Lea Salonga) Who didn't have parents direct us to a career or college choice? Who thought it had to be someone who wasn't really but followed the path that was paved for them because it was easier? If our main goal in life is to be happy, then those who love us the most should want that most for us. Sometimes we don't know who we are yet and only in traveling through life we don't really find ourselves. Never be afraid to look in the mirror and see what is in your heart and soul. Letting people see the real can be Little scary, but it's something we don't forget - at that point, we can't hold back any longer. We're just what we were born to be. When You Believe – from The Prince of Egypt (by Mariah Carey) didn't know the power behind a single faith until it happened to me. I didn't do it. did. a thought could change everything... convinces you that everything you can't see or touch still matters. You may be pulled in a direction you almost can't share, but fear is not an option. Miracles happen and show us all that no matter where we come from, what happened to us, that sometimes life gives us moments that change us forever. It's not about what we know or how far we've gone to school, but real power comes when you think - because anything is possible. Little Wonders - from Meet the Robinsons (by Rob Thomas) So we look back at life, we can choose the very bad parts that we wish we hadn't lived. Every day, we are exposed to small, seemingly insignificant moments that keep us grounded in ways that the big ones don't want. Most of us are too busy paying attention to anything other than what is directly in front of us. From time to time, what seems to be a wrong turn leads us exactly where we were meant to be all the time. Never be so busy in life that you miss the little wonders that become great memories. Feel the Light – from Home (by Jennifer Lopez) Sometimes life grabs our hand and pushes us under circumstances we don't want and falling down into a crumpled mess serves its purpose well. Every emotion we desperately try to hide comes out and we don't care what matters most. We're tripping. We're losing our way. We're giving up. This song gives me hope in places where I don't think to look and confirms that love is the greatest of all things. We all make choices and then we feel we have to live with them forever. But that's not true... we can make changes, even if it's not what others would do. A true friendship will make its rounds through life, but in the end, it is always found back home. Sometimes you just have to fight for it again. God help the outcasts – from the Hunchback of Notre Dame (by Bette Midler) None of us really fit. We are all different, but we strive to confirm the multitude and norms that society has created for us. Some days, we don't know where to go, we don't have answers and we feel alone. Perhaps we believe that no one else will truly understand what we are feeling or are afraid to be truly so vulnerable to someone. Frankly, we don't even know what we need, but we seem to lose that sense of selfishness when we give unconditionally to others, knowing that the fight is a good one. We strive to be more passionate and generous with those who have less. We want to ease the suffering of those who are bullied, laughed and smused as insignificant. From time to time, we all need to be reminded of our differences and celebrate them together instead. Rainbow Connection - from Muppet Movie (by Kermit the Frog) OK, you got me. This it's really an animated movie, but we grew up watching the Muppets every Sunday night at 7pm and needed to remind us all that rainbows come just after the rain. Life can bring its storms and we don't know how long it will take, we know that the sun will come out tomorrow (which could be from another movie...) and we can once again, see the light. Not because we think there's a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, but because there's a little magic that occurred in the way the light reflects off those drops of water. This song reminds me to believe in the power of a dream and why everyone means something to its owner. We still want the stars, we're still looking for answers in the sky, and we still like to sing this song. Conclusion: The best soundtracks come with a high score and receive many awards, but as much as achieving these distinctions count, sometimes the best songs and words strung together are hidden behind something a little less human. The basic principle of cartoons that manage to express human emotion can be difficult to achieve without music. Some of these songs will collect dust and be forgotten and just be listed as a song on a CD. Just because a high-profile actor or actress is not providing voice for a main character doesn't mean that the film is worthless. Most often, the hidden stones are the ones we have to find for ourselves. Life is about life and every challenge and opportunity that comes with it. Some days are easier than others. Some come with questions, while others provide answers. We also find hope, curiosity and love in the moments we capture in life as we follow our dreams and find good friends along the way. Let these songs become your new favorite playlist, and when you get the chance, you can also watch the movie. Recommended photo credit: Oscar Keys by unsplash.com unsplash.com